

- Tend to be more concerned with being timely than the whole story." They take one moment from that story, zoom in, and explore it.
- Tend to be focused and specific. They don't try to tell "the whole story" because it's not unique to others.
- Tend to have creative hooks. the concept or poem, elegy, or call-to-action different from all the other ones out there? How is it uniquely yours?
- Tend to have creative hooks. the concept or beyond the surface of an idea or issue.
- They're not just "deep thoughts" or manifestos; they use imagery, storytelling, and metaphors to go beyond the surface of an idea or issue.
- Tend to be driven by images, not just ideas.

the poems that stick with me:

- "Let your first drafts emerge in whatever way makes sense for you, but don't be satisfied with them."
- The most important part of writing is revising. relationships with your poems through repetition.
- Stage fright? "A powerful tactic that we tend to forget because it's so simple is to practice. Built read more.

And watch more.

And listen more.

PRESSES. If you're into spoken word, you may find books from Button Poetry, Coffee House Press, Haymarket Books, Write Bloody, and Graywolf interesting. There are also countless magazines, journals, and zines out there; one tactic: do an online search for where your favorite poets have been published, and then explore those outlets further.

VIDEO CHANNELS. Honestly, there's a lot of not-so-good spoken word available online. But there are also fantastic videos on channels like Button Poetry, Youth Speaks, and Write About Now. There's also the curated list of 100+ poems I'd recommend at www.guante.info.

SOCIAL MEDIA & PODCASTS. Check out podcasts like VS, The Slowdown, and The Poetry Question, as well as online resources like #TeachLivingPoets, Split This Rock, Poetry Magazine, Poets.org, and LitBowl.

- Take your time. Especially with social media, inspire others, and beyond.
- Have writers' block? Take a break and get inspired—poetry from other media: movies, music, visual art, and beyond.
- Read! Too many poets don't read anyone but themselves, or random quotes on social media. Youself in a cabin to write "great art" has to come from looking at friends alone. But classes, events, even just a circle of friends who meet up once a week to share feedback, or an online document that multiple people can comment on—these are valuable. Of course, we don't all have the same community resources, and some people just prefer to be on their own—that's okay too.
- Recognized that pressuring for what it is: complete access to the same community resources, and some online documents that multiple people can comment on—the world is full of people who share everything, get online, and often harmful. Set your own pace."

"Any writing advice you'd want to share?"

twin cities links

If you, like me, live in the Twin Cities, here are some great resources. If you don't live here, do some research to see if there are similar resources in your area.

TruArtSpeaks - www.TruArtSpeaks.org

- Check out the ReVerb Open Mic, the Be Heard MN Youth Poetry Slam Series, and more.

Button Poetry - www.ButtonPoetry.com

- Button publishes books, curates a huge YouTube channel, organizes contests, and offers classes.

The Loft Literary Center - www.Loft.org

- Events, classes, conferences, and more.

College poetry slam organizations

- At UMN, Hamline, Macalester, and beyond.

Many other local organizations and projects:

- The League of MN Poets, The MN Prison Writing Workshop, Black Table Arts, Word Sprout, Poetry Asylum, err, Cracked Walnut, the Asian American Literary Collective, and more!

Online classes, workshops, and events come and go; check out the digital version of this zine at www.guante.info for some links.

- A common theme here is community. There's a stereotype that "great art" has to come from looking at friends alone. But classes, events, even just a circle of friends who meet up once a week to share feedback, or an online document that multiple people can comment on—the world is full of people who share everything, get online, and often harmful. Set your own pace."
- But it's something to consider.

ONLINE COMMUNITIES

Poetry is thriving on social media. Rather than simply posting every freewrite and writing to go viral, however, we can use the internet to connect with other writers, give and get real feedback, and find creative ways to support one another as artists.

SCHOOL CLUBS AND WRITING GROUPS. Many writing groups, or literary organizations that offer clubs or workshops.

OPEN MICS AND POETRY SLAMS. Spoken word is built around spaces in which anyone can show up and share something. Find one to perform at (in-person or virtual), or to just listen and connect.

SCHOOLS AND WRITING GROUPS. Many schools have poetry clubs, and showing up to those can be a great first step. If your school doesn't have one, start one! Outside of schools, there may be local writing groups, or literary organizations that offer clubs or workshops.

OPEN MICS AND POETRY SLAMS. Spoken word is a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools, resources, and perspectives that have been useful to me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

SHOUT OUTS: 10 PERSONAL FAVORITE SPOKEN WORD POEMS (find them online!)

Ode to Thrift Stores - Ariana Brown

Alternate Heaven for Black Boys - Danez Smith

First Writing Since - Suheir Hammad

The Heart and the Fist - Rudy Francisco

Skinhead - Patricia Smith

Come Home - Kevin Yang

The Body Is Not an Apology - Sonya Renee Taylor

Clowns - Robbie Q. Telfer

Zombies - William Nu'u'tupu Giles

It's Going to Be Okay - Ollie Schminkey

thanks for reading!

Kyle "Guante" Tran Myhre is a poet and activist based in Minneapolis. His book, NOT A LOT OF REASONS TO SING, BUT ENOUGH, is available now via Button Poetry. Find more at www.guante.info.

Twitter: @elguante | IG/FB: @guantesolo

live and who we are. For various reasons, we're not all able to attend every event, or network in a traditional way, and that's okay. The following page shares a few ideas. It starts with just showing up. Of course, "showing up" in spoken word or slam poetry?

"I love to write, but how do I get involved in spoken word?"

Word and Slam Poetry at www.guante.info

Teen Things Everyone Should Know About Spoken

grit. For a more in-depth introduction, check out to the history of the oral tradition, the storyteller, the talked about as something new. While it's often spoken word is about the idea that everyone has a story, and every story matters. While it's often

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools,

resources, and perspectives that have been useful to

me as a poet, especially a spoken word poet.

There's no one way to write, perform, publish, or

live poetry. This zine simply shares some tools, resources, and perspectives that have